The Life of David from a Jewish Perspective

*To Doug, my faithful editor and friend. He loves the Word of God.
He helps me so much because he knows I can't spel.*

David, king of Judah and Israel, is one of the most significant people in the entire Bible. His reign shaped the entire nation of Israel, and Yeshua himself is known as the “Son of David.” His story occupies the majority of the books of First and Second Samuel in the TaNaKh. Despite his flaws, David was known as a man after God’s own heart, the most pious of all Hebrew kings, and the standard by which every other Judean king would be measured. The prophecy of a king whose throne would endure forever fueled Messianic hopes among the Jews - hopes which were finally fulfilled in the coming of Messiah Yeshua, the physical descendant and promised Son of David.¹

The Use of the New International Version

Because I am writing this commentary on David from a Jewish perspective, I will be using the New International Version unless otherwise indicated. There will be times when I will be using the Complete Jewish Bible by David Stern. But generally I will be using the NIV translation for the Jewish perspective.

The use of ADONAI

Long before Yeshua's day, the word ADONAI had, out of respect, been substituted in speaking and in reading aloud for God's personal name, the four Hebrew letters yud-heh-vav-heh, variously written in English as YHVH. The Talmud (Pesachim 50a) made it a requirement not to pronounce Tetragrammaton, meaning the four-letter name of God, and this remains the rule in most modern Jewish settings. In deference to this tradition, which is unnecessary but harmless, I will be using ADONAI or Ha'Shem where YHVH is meant.² In ancient times when the scribes were translating the Hebrew Scriptures, they revered the name of YHVH so much that they would use a quill to make one stroke of the name and then throw it away. Then they would make another stroke and throw that quill away until the name was completed. His name became so sacred to them that they started to substitute the phrase the Name, instead of writing or pronouncing His Name. Over centuries of doing this, the actual letters and pronunciation of His Name was lost. The closest we can come is YHVH, with no syllables. The pronunciation has been totally lost. Therefore, the name Yahweh is only a guess of what the original name sounded like. Both ADONAI and Ha'Shem are substitute names for YHVH. ADONAI is more of an affectionate name like daddy, while Ha'Shem is a more formal name like sir.

The use of TaNaKh

The Hebrew word TaNaKh is an acronym, based on the letters T (for "Torah"), N (for "Nevi'im," or the Prophets), and K (for "Ketuvim," or the Sacred Writings). It is the collection of the teachings of God to human beings in document form. The term "Old Covenant" implies that it is no longer valid, or at the very least outdated. Something old, to be either ignored or discarded. But Jesus Himself said: Don't think I have come to abolish the Torah and the Prophets, I have not come to abolish but to complete (Matthew 5:17 CJB). I will be using the Hebrew acronym TaNaKh instead of the phrase the Old Testament, throughout this devotional commentary.

The use of dates in the life of David

I have written this commentary on a timeline of David's life. There are certain dates that we know for a fact. For example, we know that David was thirty years old when he was crowned king at Hebron in 1010 BC (see Ce - David Anointed King Over Y'hudah), and he was seventy years old when he died in 970 BC, serving as king over Isra'el for forty years (to see link click Fi - David's Death). Using those dates, I have worked back and believe that David was born in 1040 BC (see Ag - Young David). As I progress through the commentary, I have given the approximate ages of David during his lifetime. These are not, “Oh, by the way” observations, but an important part of the story. When I realize that David was brought into Sha’ul’s palace at about 12 years old to sooth the tormented king with his musical talent, I ask myself, “What was I doing at 12?” I was trying to hit the curve ball. When I think about David killing Goliath about the age of 15, I ask myself, “What was I doing at 15?” Trying to get up enough courage to ask Sue Herwig out for a date. All of his accomplishments at those ages should only heighten our respect and admiration for David. When I learn that Y’honatan and David became inseparable friends when Y’honatan was about 45 and David was about 20, I think to myself, “Wow, I thought they were about the same age.” Y’honatan was the prince and heir apparent to the throne, yet, knowing it was God’s will that David be the next king, Y’honatan willingly gave up any hope of being king. Instead of being a rival, David became his best friend, being like a brother to him. Y’honatan’s unselfish actions at his age should only heighten our respect and admiration for him. So when you come across their ages, realize how amazing their accomplishments and sacrifices were.

First and Second Samuel

Title

In the Jewish canon the two books of Samuel were originally one. There is no break in the Masoretic text between First and Second Samuel; the Masoretic notes at the end of Second Samuel give a total of 1,506 verses for the entire body of writing and point to First Samuel 28:24 as the middle verse of the “book.” The scroll of Samuel, like the scrolls of Kings and Chronicles, both of which are slightly longer than Samuel, was too unwieldy to be handled with ease and so was divided into two parts in the early manuscripts of the Septuagint (The Greek translation of the TaNaKh 250 BC). Not until the fifteenth century AD was the Hebrew text of Samuel separated into two books, and the first printed Hebrew Bible to exhibit the division was the Daniel Bomberg edition published in Venice, Italy in 1516/17.³

Names

The Hebrew name is Shmu’el since the prophet Samuel is the dominant figure in the early chapters. The Greek name from the Septuagint is called the “Book of Kingdoms.” The Latin name in the Vulgate Bible is referred to as Libri Regnorum, or Book of Kings and Samuel and Kings are each divided into four parts: First, Second, Third and Fourth Kings respectively, which has caused much confusion to non-Catholics in the past. In English

Bibles, they are First and Second Samuel, First and Second Kings.

Author

According to the Babylonian Talmud “Samuel wrote the book that bears his name” (b. B. Bat. 14b). The same Talmud asserts that Samuel himself wrote the first twenty-four chapters of First Samuel (since First Samuel 25:1 reports his death) and that the rest of the books of Samuel were the work of Nathan and Gad (b. B. Bat. 15a). First Chronicles 29:29 is doubtless the source of the latter rabbinic assessment: As for the events of King David’s reign, from beginning to end, they are written in the records of Samuel the seer, the records of Nathan the prophet and the records of Gad the seer. However, First Chronicles 29:29 is merely listing sources used by the Chronicler and should not be understood as having anything to say about the authorship of the books of Samuel. Although the priests Abiathar (First Samuel 22:18-23, 23:6-9; Second Samuel 15:24-29, 19:11), Ahimaaz (Second Samuel 15:27 and 36, 17:17 and 20, 18:19, 22-23, 27-29) and Zabud (First Kings 4:5), among others, have been proposed as possible candidates, arguments in their favor fail to convince. In the last analysis, we must leave the authorship to Samuel – and, for that matter, of other books of the TaNaKh such as Joshua, Judges, Kings and Chronicles – in the realm of anonymity. Ultimately, of course, the Ruach ha-Kodesh is the Author who prompted the inspired narrator to put pen to parchment.⁴

Date of the Books

With respect to the books of Samuel, all that can be said for certain is that since they report the last words of David (Second Samuel 23:1), they could not have been written earlier than the second quarter of the tenth century BC (David having died in 970 BC). On the basis of historical and archaeological date as well as literary analysis, Baruch Halpern concludes that “the composition of Samuel cannot be placed later than the 9th century, and probably should be dated in the 10th century, shortly after David’s death in Solomon’s day.”⁵

Historical Setting

Because of its setting during the period of the judges, the book of Ruth was inserted between Judges and Samuel at least as early as the Septuagint (LXX) and continues to occupy that position in most versions of the Bible to the present time. In the Jewish canon, however, Ruth is one of the five festival scrolls, the Megillot, and therefore appears closer to the end of the TaNaKh in the Writings. Therefore, when Ruth is placed in the Writings, the books of Samuel follow immediately after the book of Judges.

After the conquest of Canaan by Joshua, the Israelites experienced the normal range of problems the colonizers of a newly occupied territory. The situation, however, was made worse not only by the resilience of the Canaanites but also the moral, spiritual and military failures of the Jews. The rebellion against the Covenant that YHVH had established with them at Sinai (see the commentary on Deuteronomy Bi - The Stipulations of the Covenant) brought divine retribution, and the restoration that resulted from their repentance lasted only until they rebelled again. The dreary cycle of rebellion - retribution - repentance - restoration - rebellion was repeated over and over again throughout the book of Judges, which in many respects rehearses the darkest days of Isra'el's long history.

By the end of the Judges the situation in the Land had become intolerable. Isra'el was at the point of death and anarchy reigned: Everyone did as they saw fit (Judges 21:25). A series of judges, upon whom the Ruach HaKodesh came with energizing power, provided little more than temporary relief from Isra'el's enemies within and without, who were both numerous and varied. More than three centuries of settlement did not materially improve Isra'el's position, and the righteous of the TaNaKh must have begun crying out for change.

In the days of the judges, Isra'el had no king, and it was becoming apparent to many that she desperately needed one. They wanted to be like all the nations around them! This desire for a king (First Samuel 8:5) was not in itself inappropriate. Their sin consisted in the fact that they were asking for a king to lead us and to go out before us and to fight our battles (First Samuel 8:20). In other words, they refused to believe that YHVH would grant them victory in His own time and according His own good pleasure. They were willing to exchange humble faith in the protection and power of ADONAI-Tzva'ot for misguided reliance on the strength of the fighting men of Isra'el.

Sha'ul ruled for 42 years (First Samuel 13:1) from 1052 BC to 1010 BC, David ruled for 40 years from 1010 BC to 970 BC, and Solomon ruled 40 years from 970 to about 930 BC (First Kings 11:42). Therefore, in the life of David, we see about the last 20 years of Sha'ul's life, all of David's life, Solomon's birth and at the end of David's life, the tumultuous transfer of authority from David to Solomon, God's anointed, and the beginning of his reign.

Purpose

There are three specific purposes of the books of Samuel. First, is the historical purpose. It picks up from Judges 21:25 NLT, we read that in those days Isra'el had no king and all the people did whatever seemed right in their own eyes. So the purpose of the books of Samuel was to explain how Isra'el gained a king. And in doing so, the difference between human choice, which was Sha'ul, and divine choice, which was David. Keep in mind, it was already God's plan for Isra'el to have a king at some point because in Genesis 49:10, Jacob prophesied that a scepter will not depart from Y'hudah, for the Messiah would be a King from Judah, and therefore, a kingship would be established. Moreover, in Deuteronomy 17:14-20 the Ruach commands Isra'el to be sure to appoint over you a king that ADONAI your God chooses, and spells out the rules the king must follow when they have one. David was supposed to be Isra'el's first king, but because they didn't wait on the LORD (Psalm 27:14), they got Sha'ul (and a lot of heartache) instead of David. So the historical purpose was to show how Isra'el finally received a king - Yeshua Messiah was an ancestor of King David (see the commentary on Ruth Bd - Coda: The Genealogy of David).

Secondly, is the vindication purpose. David needed to be vindicated because he did not highjack the throne away from the house of Sha'ul. David had two chances to kill Sha'ul (see Bj - David Spares Sha'ul's Life and Bp - David Again Spares Sha'ul's Life) and did not do so. And when the Philistines finally killed Sha'ul, David was three days journey away. In addition, when David heard about the death of Sha'ul he wasn't happy about it, but lamented his death (see By - David's Lament for Sha'ul and Y'honatan). He was not involved in the murder of Abner, the general in charge of Sha'ul's army, nor Ish-Bosheth, who succeeded Sha'ul as king of the northern tribes of Isra'el. He was merciful to Sha'ul's grandson (see Da - David and Mephiboseth), and he had no choice but to hand the seven sons of Sha'ul over to the Gibeonites for execution as a result of Sha'ul's sins and to avert a plague (see Ef - The LORD's Wrath Against Isra'el).

Thirdly, there is a theological purpose. For the most part the Bible is not merely trying to write history for history's sake. The Ruach is not only writing biographies. One of His three purposes is to teach theology. To that end, the theological purpose of the books of Samuel is the establishment of the Davidic Covenant (see Ct - The LORD's Covenant with David), just as Genesis records the establishment of God's Covenant with Abraham. The books of Samuel also emphasize God's providence. People choose kings, but YHVH chooses dynasties.

First and Second Kings

Title

The book of First and Second Kings were so named because they record and interpret the reigns of all the kings of Isra'el and Judah except Sha'ul. David's last days are mentioned in First Kings 1:1 to 2:12, however, most of his reign is recorded in Second Samuel Chapters 2 to 24 and First Chronicles Chapters 11 to 29. In the TaNaKh First and Second Kings were one scroll and were regarded as a continuation of the historical narrative begun in First and Second Samuel. The Septuagint, the Greek translation of the TaNaKh, divides Kings into two parts that constitute First and Second Kings in English Bibles, although the Septuagint calls those books "3 and 4 Kingdoms" (and calls First and Second Samuel "1 and 2 Kingdoms"). The title Kings came from Jerome's Latin Vulgate translation that was made about six centuries after the Septuagint.

The release of Jehoiachin (see the commentary on Jeremiah Du - Jehoiachin Ruled For 3 Months in 598 BC) from prison in Babylon is the last event recorded in Second Kings. This took place in the thirty-seventh year of his imprisonment in 560 BC. As a result, First and Second Kings could not have been written before his release. It seems unlikely that the return of the Jews from the Babylonian captivity in 539 BC (see the commentary on Jeremiah Gu - Seventy Years of Imperial Babylonian Rule) had taken place when First and Second Kings were written; had it occurred, the author would have probably referred to it. Therefore, First and Second Kings were completed sometime between 560 and 539 BC.⁶

Author

Though it is obvious that the author used various source materials in writing First and Second Kings, the books bear the marks of a single author. Some of those indicators are the choice of materials recorded (for example, the records of the deeds and evaluations of the kings, and the ministries of several prophets), the emphasis that run throughout the books (for example, the ministries of the prophets and the evaluation of the kings in relation to the Torah, and the emphasis on the dynasty of David), the method of expressing the beginnings and endings of the king's reigns (for example, First Kings 14:31, 15:1-3 and 23-26), and the phrases and terms that appear from beginning to end (for example, now the rest of the acts of . . . are they not written . . . evil in the sight of ADONAI . . . he reigned . . . years and his mother's name was . . . as surely as the LORD lives).

The identity of the author is unknown, but he may have been an exile who lived in Babylon. Some commentators have pointed to his recording Jehoiachin's release from captivity in Babylon in support of this conclusion since this event seems to them to have been specifically significant for the Jews in captivity. This line of reasoning has led students of First and Second Kings to suggest such notable exilic Jews as Ezra and Ezeki'el as the author. The rabbis teach that Jeremiah was the author. But whoever the author was, he seems to be an eyewitness of the Jewish nation's final demise and was concerned to show the divine reasons for that fall. In doing so he utilized many sources, weaving the details together into an integrated whole that graphically portrayed Isra'el's failure to keep the covenant.⁷

Scope

First and Second Kings provide a record of Isra'el's history from the beginning of the movement to place Solomon on David's throne through the end of the reign of Zedekiah, Judah's last king. Zedekiah ruled until the surviving southern kingdom of Judah was taken captive and Babylonian governors were placed in charge of affairs in Palestine.

Three major periods of Isra'el's history can be distinguished in Kings. First, the united monarchy (during which time Isra'el and Judah remained united under Solomon as they had been under Sha'ul and David); secondly, the divided monarchy (from the rebellion of Isra'el against the rule of the Judean kings until Isra'el was carried off into captivity by the Assyrians; and thirdly, the surviving kingdom (the record of Judah's affairs from the deportation of Isra'el to Judah's own defeat and exile by the Babylonians).

First and Second Kings were not divided as they are because a natural break occurs in the narrative, but because the large scroll of Kings needed to be divided into two smaller, more easily manageable units. The result was two books of almost equal length.

Purpose

The books of First and Second Kings, like other historical books of the TaNaKh, were written not simply to record facts of historical significance, but to reveal and preserve spiritual lessons that have timeless value. Like all Scripture, these are books for today . . . where life and the Bible meet. For all Scripture is God-breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness, so that the servant of God may be thoroughly equipped for every good work (Second Timothy 3:16). The author's chief historical concern was to preserve a record of the kings of both Isra'el and Judah. The emphasis in this record is on the royal actions and also on the actions of selected prophets that bear on the period in which they ministered.

In addition, the author sought to evaluate the monarchy by the standard of the Torah. Besides tracing the decline of the Northern and Southern Kingdoms, he pointed out the reasons for their decline in general and the fate of each king in particular. He may have intended to teach the exiles in Babylon the reasons for their plight so that they would learn from their past, mainly God's devotion to His covenant (see the commentary on Deuteronomy Ay - The Covenant on Mount Sinai) and the evils of idolatry are emphasized.⁸

Psalms

Title of the Psalms

The English title Psalms (or Psalter) is derived from the Greek translation of the TaNaKh. In the Codex Vaticanus (fourth century AD) the title Psalmoi and the subtitle Biblos paslmon (Book of Psalms) were used. In the Codex Alexandrinus (fifth century AD) the name Psalterion appears. The Greek word psalmos, which translates the Hebrew mizmor, signifies music accompanied by stringed instruments. Under the influence of the Septuagint and of Christianity, the word psalmos came to designate a song of praise without the emphasis on accompaniment by stringed instruments. Because mizmor is used in the titles of 57 of the psalms, the Greek translators used the translation of that word for the title of the entire collection. In the TaNaKh the title is the Book of Praises, referring to their content rather than form. This title is fitting for their collection of hymns used in Isra'el's worship, because most of the psalms contain an element of praise.⁹

The Psalms as Windows into Isra'el's Faith

The 150 psalms that the Ruach ha-Kodesh has given us, is more than merely a book of Isra'el's prayer and praise. It is a cross section of God's revelation to Isra'el and of Isra'el's response in faith to ADONAI. In them, we receive windows that enable us to look out on our brothers and sisters in the faith of more than twenty-five hundred years ago. They invite us to experience how the LORD's people in the past related to Him. They witness to the glory of Tziyon, to God's covenant with David, to the faithfulness of YHVH, to the exodus and conquest traditions, to God the Creator-Redeemer-King, and to the Tender Warrior. We see an interplay of many different motifs and emphases, which, when isolated, help us to understand better the TaNaKh as a whole and its bearing on the B'rit Chadashah (New Testament) because the TaNaKh looks forward and the B'rit Chadashah looks back.

The book of Psalms is God's prescription for complacent believers, because through it He reveals how great, wonderful, magnificent, wise, and utterly awe-inspiring He is! If the LORD's people before the coming of Messiah in the Gospels could have had such a faith in ADONAI - a witness to His greatness and readiness to help - how much more should this be true among us today! The book of Psalms can revolutionize our devotional life, our family patterns, and the fellowship and witness of the congregations of God.¹⁰

The Psalms is Our word to God and God's Word to Us: The Inspiration and Authority of the Psalms

The book of Psalms is first and foremost God's Word to His people. We hear the voice of YHVH in each individual psalm through the many moods of the psalms and through the many themes of the Psalter. The purpose of the psalms is the same as any other part of Scripture (Second Tim 3:16), nevertheless it is unique. In it ADONAI not only speaks to His people but also encourages us to use the language of the psalms in our individual and communal prayers and praise. By applying these ancient psalms to modern situations, the life of faith, hope, and love of each believer and the congregations of God can be greatly enhanced.

The psalms encourage a conversation between the LORD and His children. Though no book of the TaNaKh has been more important in the history of God's people than the book of Psalms, we are in danger of losing it, partly because of lack of use and partly because of the skills required for understanding them. Ha'Shem expects His children to incorporate the psalms into every aspect of our lives. There are seven values of the psalms to our lives:

1. Prayer is our communion with God. Prayers in the psalms sometimes take the form of complaints against God. The psalms lament adversity, describe the evil in His world, or petition YHVH to be faithful to His promises. Truly, the psalms affect our whole being. There is not a single emotion that we can be aware of, that is not represented in the psalms.
2. Praise is a person's longing for ADONAI and for others to be moved with the same desire for God. The acts of God in the past filled His children with longing for a renewal of His acts, therefore intertwining past history (creation, the exodus, conquest, restoration, and so on) with future eschatology. Any token of God's goodness in the past energizes a greater hope for the future. So praise bridges the two horizons of the past and the future.

3. The psalms have a distinct place in the liturgy of the congregations of God. From the earliest of times the psalms have been the manual of praise and prayer in public worship. But lately, things have changed. The psalms are sung and read less and less. Hymns, gospel songs and other readings have taken their place in public and private worship to our detriment.
4. The psalms inspire the believer with the hope of the kingdom of God, not only now, but also in the messianic Kingdom and the Eternal State (see the commentary on Revelation Fq - The Eternal State). They guide the believer into a clearer picture of the God who has acted in creation, revelation and redemption, and who will act decisively in establishing His Kingdom. The study of the psalms transforms our perspective on ourselves and on the world.
5. The psalms reflect the faith experienced by God's people before the Second Coming (see the commentary on Isaiah Kg - The Second Coming of Jesus Christ to Bozrah). Their expressions of frustration, impatience, anger, and joy reflect the tension between the "now but not yet." One of the issues in the psalms of lament lies in their definition as petition or lament. They are both. The emphasis on prayer as petition may emphasize our submission to the power of God. The stress on lament brings out our struggle with YHVH as the psalmist wrestles with God's freedom, God's promises, and his own inability to understand God. In either case, the psalmist cries out in faith for the fullness of redemption. Now that Yeshua has come, the psalms continue to hold great value for believers today as we, too, cry out for the day of our redemption. The B'rit Chadashah is clear that Jesus is the Messiah. He is the only Mediator between God and mankind. He alone will bring in the fullness of redemption. The psalms have been, in the truest sense, the prayer-book for believers of all ages. The psalms bridge the gap between "the then and the now," the ancient world and the present world, probably better than any other book of the Bible.
6. God addresses both the individual and the community. At times it may seem that the psalms should be limited to Isra'el in her national existence (community laments) or to the king (royal prayers) and that we may use the psalms very selectively. Some have been guilty of emphasizing Isra'el's collective experiences as a worshiping community to the virtual exclusion of an individual experience. However, the psalms can also be most valuable in our personal lives. They speak to our hearts and can transform us.
7. The value of the psalms lies in their connection between the TaNaKh and the B'rit Chadashah. Strictly speaking, they do belong in the TaNaKh and not to the B'rit Chadashah, as the psalmists stand among the people of God who served Him at the Temple and knew only of the kingdom of David and his heirs. However, the psalmists also longed for the day of redemption, the light of which grew ever more brightly with the birth of Immanuel (Isaiah 8:1 to 9:7), His early ministry, crucifixion, ascension to heaven and present rule at the Father's right hand. Yeshua is the Messiah of God, in whom all the promises of YHVH are sealed, including His messianic rule. This makes us different from the righteous of the TaNaKh. But Jesus and His disciples loved the psalms, which witness to the suffering and exaltation of the Son of Man. The early believers used the psalms in explaining Christ's ministry, resurrection, exaltation and present rule.¹¹

First Chronicles

Author and Date

If we accept the tradition that the canon of the TaNaKh was finalized during the general period of the Persian monarch Artach'shashta who died in 424 BC, then Chronicles would have to be written before that date. If its composition, moreover, is associated with the work of Ezra, we must notice that the Aramaic language found in the book of Ezra matches that of the Elephantine papyri, which likewise belongs to the fifth century BC.

Relationships between the books of Chronicles and Ezra provide the most important single clue for fixing the date of Chronicles and also for its authorship. Since Chronicles appears to be the work of an individual writer, who was a Levitical leader, some identification with Ezra the priest and scribe (see the commentary on Ezra-Nehemiah Bg - Ezra's Return to Palestine), appears likely. Not only that, but the personal qualities of the author show he was a priestly official of knowledge, insight, wisdom, courage, organizing ability, and determination to carry out his plan.

The literary styles of the books are similar, and their contents have much in common: the frequent lists of genealogies, their focus on ritual, and joint devotion to the Torah. Most significant of all, the closing verses of Second Chronicles 36:22-23 are repeated as the opening verses of Ezra 1:1-3a. The rabbis teach that Ezra wrote Chronicles, along with the book that bears his name, and is also upheld by as unanimous a consensus as can be, as can be found anywhere in the analysis of the Scriptures.

Therefore, for those who accept his historicity of the events recorded in Ezra - from the decree of Cyrus in 538 BC down to Ezra's reform in 458-457 BC - and the validity of Ezra's autobiographical writing within the next few years, the date of the composition for both Chronicles and Ezra as one consecutive history must be about 450 BC from Tziyon.¹²

Purpose and Structure

While the books of Samuel and Kings give a political history of Isra'el and Judah, Chronicles present a religious history of the Davidic dynasty of Judah. The former are written from a prophetic and moral viewpoint, while the latter from a priestly and spiritual viewpoint. First Chronicles begins with the royal line of David and then traces the spiritual significance of David's righteous reign. The Chronicler omitted the slaughter of two-thirds of the Mo'avite army because David was a man of war (First Chronicles 28:3). This was precisely the reason that David was not permitted to build the Temple.
