Attempts to Snare Nehemiah

Nehemiah 6: 1-9

Attempts to snare Nehemiah DIG: As the rebuilding project is almost over, what final threats does Nehemiah face from Sanballat, Tobiah and their cohorts? What does the proposed meeting purport to be? Why does Nehemiah suspect otherwise? Even if it were sincere or well-intentioned, how does Nehemiah not let the “good” get in the way the “better?” What impact does the “unsealed letter” intended to have on the public at large? On the ruling Persian king? Do you think Nehemiah was really scared? Why? Why not? How does he face those who would slander him?

REFLECT: How complete is your defense against those who would sidetrack you? What weak spots in the wall of your heart need shoring up? In going about doing good, when have you been tempted to settle for second best? Why don’t you drop some merely good projects and attempts a truly great project, worthy of your best effort?

The average person doesn’t realize the tremendous pressures and testings that people experience day after day in positions in leadership. Leaders are often blamed for things they didn’t do and criticized for things they tried to do. They are misquoted and misunderstood and rarely given the opportunity to set the record straight. If they act quickly, they are reckless; if they bide their time, they are cowardly or unconcerned.²⁵⁵

As a result, if you are a leader, you spend your time either on top or on the bottom. You’re either a hero or a villain; respected or reviled. Rarely anything between those two extremes. People in leadership must live on the yo-yo of public opinion; the target for cheap shots on the bottom, the object of great admiration on the upside. The outhouse is difficult to endure. But it’s when we are under the verbal attack that we show our true colors.

After overcoming internal economic obstacles (5:1-19), the wall was finished except for the gates. Now it was reported to Sanballat, Tobiah, and Geshem (to see link click Cc - Samaritan Opposition to the Building of the Walls of Jerusalem), and the rest of our enemies that I had rebuilt the wall and no breach remained in it - even though, at that time, I had not positioned the doors in the gates. Sanballat and Geshem attempted to lure him outside the City to kill him. They sent word to Nehemiah, saying: Come, let us meet together in one of the villages in the plain of Ono, south of Joppa on the western coast of Judah (Nehemiah 6:1-2). But they were scheming to do me harm. Even though he had been a faithful, stable, and consistent leader, a plot to defeat him was underway.

The attack on Nehemiah was very significant because it happened at a very crucial time in his life. He was nearly finished with the greatest task that the citizens of Yerushalayim had seen in their generation. Not very long before they were ready to cut the ribbon and have a joyous celebration, Nehemiah was most vulnerable. In the eleventh example of leadership in the life of Nehemiah, wise leaders must watch out that they don't fall (see Bt - The Third Return). So often the vulnerable person isn't the one who stumbles, but the one who thinks he or she isn't capable of falling.

The Scriptures tell us of failures that happened from time to time. When did Bathsheba cross the gaze of David. At a time when he was undefeated in battle. From the time he was crowned king until he fell with Bathsheba, David had not known defeat - politically, militarily, or personally. When did Jonah fall into self-pity? After the greatest revival that Nineveh had ever seen. When was Joseph tempted by Mrs. Potiphar? Soon after he had been promoted by under Mr. Potiphar and given a leadership position.²⁵⁶

Nehemiah was already planning the dedication service for the completed wall when the enemy attacked. They offered to meet him in a village halfway between Jerusalem and Samaria, a quiet place where they could make plans on how to supposedly work together. Of course, the enemy's strategy was, "If you can't beat'em, join'em" (and then take over later). Once the Enemy of souls gets a foothold in a ministry, he starts to weaken it from within, and ultimately, the ministry will fail. While cooperation in the Lord's work is a noble thing, leaders must take care that they cooperate with the right people at the right time for the right reasons, otherwise they may end up cooperating with the Enemy. The Adversary is a master deceiver and has his servants ready to join hands with God's people so he can weaken their hands in their work (Second Corinthians 11:13-15).

Loving compromise and cooperation can be good and useful if there are no moral or spiritual issues involved. Happy compromise can invigorate a marriage or strengthen a ministry (Philippians 1:1-4), but this is a compromise among people who love each other and have the same purposes in mind. When you invite the devil to join your team; however, expect him to change the rules and the goals, and expect to be defeated.²⁵⁷

Nehemiah's answer was immediate and unflinching. He knew his enemies were trying to lure him into a trap, so he sent messengers to them saying: I am doing an important work, so I cannot come down. Why should the work stop while I leave it and come down to you (Nehemiah 6:3)? There is no mention of his suspicions as to their real intent. This is Nehemiah the politician - astute and resolute. Naivete here would have proved disastrous. There is a time to keep silent, and a time to speak; a time to love, and a time to hate; a time for war, and a time for peace (Ecclesiastes 3:7-8). A politician, no less than a lowly believer, must be able to discern the appropriate occasion for each response.²⁵⁸

On their next attempt, they tried a different approach. By that time, Sanballat and Geshem had dropped their pretense of friendliness and tried to spread rumors that would damage Nehemiah's reputation. Nehemiah's enemies were nothing if not persistent. They sent me the same message four times, and each time I returned a similar response to them. But the fifth time Sanballat sent his young aide to me in this way, he had an open letter in his hand (Nehemiah 6:4-5). An open letter to a royal governor would be both intimidating and insulting. Official letters were typically rolled up and sealed with an official signet by the letter's sender or one of his assisting officials. An open or unsealed letter was not only a sign of disrespect and open criticism but also suggested the information therein was public knowledge, a vicious way to attack a leader. The goal of this document was to intimidate Nehemiah into stopping the work.²⁵⁹

Things were no longer so cordial, and Nehemiah's suspicions were proved to be well founded. In it was written, "It has been heard among the nations - and Geshem substantiates it - that you and the Jews are planning to revolt. That is why you are rebuilding the wall (Nehemiah 6:6a). The letter suggested that Nehemiah's intent to revolt was common knowledge that would get back to the king of Persia if he did not come to the requested conference. It would have been considered a serious charge in Nehemiah's day, because Persian kings tolerated no resistance from their subjects. This information, had it been true, would have brought Persian troops against the Jews. Even though Judah had a reputation for breaking its allegiance with its overlord kings, on this occasion that was not the case.²⁶⁰

Sanballat wanted the public to know the contents of the letter because he hoped to undermine Nehemiah's reputation and authority. Furthermore, according to these reports, you are to become their king and have even prophets to make this proclamation about you in Jerusalem saying, 'There is a king [Nehemiah] in Judah.' Now, the king is going to hear about these reports. So come now! Let us confer together" (Nehemiah 6:6b-7). If some of the Jewish workers believed what was in the letter, Sanballat could organize them and create division within the ranks. It was a splendid opportunity for the enemy to divide and conquer. In addition, if there were such prophets, Sanballat had actually hired them to feed incorrect information, thus generating the false rumor. By allowing the false prophets to make public statements that Nehemiah had made himself king, Sanballat hoped to make it appear that the Jews were supplanting Persian rule.²⁶¹

Leaders must know how to handle false accusations, vicious letters, unfounded press reports and plain old gossip. Otherwise, these devilish weapons will sidetrack them and they will lose their perspective and spend so much time defending themselves that they will neglect their ministry. How would Nehemiah react? It is legitimate to defend oneself against inaccurate slander, but it is often better to ignore it if possible. Knowing the accusations were lies, Nehemiah was able to simply deny them and go about his work. He knew his character was such that no honest person would believe the false reports. If we take care of our character, we can trust God to take care of our reputation.²⁶²

Then Nehemiah sent a message to Sanballat and Geshem, saying: Nothing like what you are saying is happening; you are devising them from your own heart. Basically, Nehemiah effectively called their bluff, confident in his relationship with the king (see By - Favor with King Artakh'shasta), and his correct assessment of the situation, namely that the plotters were merely trying to intimidate the Jews in the hope that the resulting discouragement would grind the wall project to a halt. For Sanballat and Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies were all trying to intimidate us, thinking, "Their hands will become weak from the work and it will not be done" (Nehemiah 6:8-9a).²⁶³

The urgency of the situation, as well as Nehemiah's implicit trust, are both underscored by the concluding prayer. This is the seventh of twelve prayers recorded in Nehemiah (9:5ff, 1:5-11, 2:4, 4:4, 4:9, 5:19, here, 6:14, 13:14, 13:22, 13:29, and 13:31). So now, ADONAI, strengthen my hands (Nehemiah 6:9b)! Nehemiah's response is an example of how believers should respond to such things: not with retaliation and revenge but with patient and careful denial. And like the Psalmist before him, Nehemiah found strength and refuge by leaning on the LORD in his trouble. If his enemies' words could not be trusted, the words of God are a source of balm and comfort:

ADONAI, let me not be ashamed, for I have called upon You. Let the wicked be ashamed - let them be silent in Sh'ol. Let the lying lips be mute. For they speak arrogantly against the righteous, with pride and contempt. How great is Your goodness, which You have stored up for those who fear You, which You have given to those who take refuge in You, before the children of men (Psalm 31:18-20).

For the wicked and the deceitful have opened their mouth against me. They spoke to me with a lying tongue, with hateful words surrounded me, and fought against me without cause. In return for my love they are my accusers, but I am in prayer (Psalm 109:2-4).

Nehemiah's resort to prayer - So now, ADONAI, strengthen my hands - was in itself a confession of his weakness. He keenly felt the biting allegation and the possibility that once made there are always those who are willing to believe it in the spirit the worst in people. No matter what Nehemiah said from that time forward, there would always be the possibility that Artakh'shasta would harbor doubts about Nehemiah's true intentions. And not just the king, but his own friends! Would they, too, now have doubts concerning what this project had ultimately been about? If Nehemiah could not be certain of what his friends or his king might now be thinking about his true motive in rebuilding the walls of Yerushalayim, he could always be certain that YHVH is without guile and that his cries would ascend to Him and be heard in heaven. God knew Nehemiah's heart.²⁶⁴
